DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is in response to the Request for Continued Examination received January 22, 2010.

Response to Arguments

2. Regarding Lee's evaluations deciding which model to use can be an evaluation of fraud which is then further analyzed by the selected model using database data. The requests for more information are an override request. If the requested information doesn't match it is evaluated as probably fraudulent if it does it is assumed to be the actual person.
3. Applicant's arguments were considered but were not persuasive.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 1-3, and 5-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Lee et al. (U.S. Patent 7,263,506 B2) in view of Penzias (U.S. Patent 5,311,594).

As per claims 1 and 7 Lee teaches scoring the likelihood of fraud in a transaction based on the data available about the transaction which is related to the customer because they selected what to buy and where to send it. (see Lee column 4 lines 50 – column 5 line 38) This is done using multiple statistical models based on the type of transaction involved which is selectively evaluating a first set of criteria and then selectively evaluating a second set of criteria. If there is considered too high a likelihood of fraud a web page requesting further information from the customer can be generated. (see Lee column 8 lines 6-7) While Lee does not specify what further information should be requested Penzias teaches requesting information to confirm a card holder's identity by asking selectively asking one of several questions that the customer would know the answer to confirm identity. (see Penzias abstract) This is overriding a denial that would otherwise have been issued. Therefore it would have been obvious to request further information to confirm the identity of the cardholder using known methods to achieve an expected result.

As per claim 2 Lee teaches the purchase of goods and services over the Internet. (see Lee column 1 lines 23-28)

As per claims 3 and 8 Penzias teaches the information being stored to confirm identity includes address and telephone number information. (see Penzias column 4 lines 7-21 The information is being used as a password even if it is not called such.) Therefore it would have been obvious to a user of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use such information as passwords.

As per claims 5 and 9 Lee teaches using a score to authorize a transaction and Penzias teaches using a properly answered question to authorize a transaction. Therefore it would have been obvious to request further information to confirm the identity of the cardholder using known methods to achieve an expected result.

As per claim 6 it is a parallel system claim to method claim 1 and is rejected under the same rationale as claim 1.

As per claim 10 completing a purchase changes the financial information related to said transaction card account.
